Seeing Through Plastics

There was a time when some people who needed eyeglasses hesitated to wear them, the Better Vision Institute recalls. Glasses were thought to make a person look either highbrow or elderly. But now the tide has turned. Spectacles are items of style that can make one look gay or dignified, dashing or demure. They can be tastefully selected to suit the wearer's personality and wardrobe, and to flatter his or her appearance. This is a healthy revolution which is saving many eyes from strain. It is even causing some women who do not need glasses to wear them for their fashion value. Smart designs in gold and rimless mountings deserve much of the credit for the charm of present-day eye-wear, according to the Institute. And the attractiveness of modern plastic frames is largely responsible, too.

Cause of Thunder

What makes the noise of thunder?—As a lightning flash occurs, the air along its path is quickly heated and this causes it to expand very suddenly. Such expansion, really an explosion, causes air waves to travel outwards in all directions, and these make the sound of the thunder. Sound travels about 1100 feet per second so with a long flash, following an irregular path, the sound from the nearest part may reach the ear several seconds before that from the more distant sections. In addition, there may be echoes from hills and mountains, and all this causes the familiar long-drawn out roll of thunder. Such sounds are seldom heard more than 12 or 15 miles away.

Cottage Cheese

Cottage cheese deserves a more prominent place in family meal plans than it sometimes gets, according to food experts. It is an excellent source of protein—a necessity for good muscle growth and an aid in prevention of fatigue. And plain cottage cheese is relatively inexpensive. However, buyers will find that if cream has been added it will cost about twice as much as the plain cottage cheese. Many homemakers use cottage cheese as a stuffing for a tomato salad and in pie or cake. Also, it may be mixed with raisins to use as sandwich filling, or it may be used to stuff prunes for salads.

Girl Needs Good Excuse Before Missing Classes

OKLAHOMA CITY — Bernice Brown, a 14-year-old ninth grader in Capitol Hill junior high school here, really needs a good excuse to be absent from her classes—or rather, to miss any of her classes.

Bernice, a victim of rheumatoid arthritis, has her education at her fingertips. Confined to bed, she recites her lessons or listens to her classmates at the school by pushing the button on a combination microphone-speaker installed at the bedside.

A telephone cable connects her home to the school and one of her classmates carries the microphone-speaker from room to room as classes change.

Iron and Steel Industry Sets High Wage Levels

Iron and steel wage rates and the total payroll of the industry reached new high levels in 1950. Hourly wage rates were increased an average of about 16 cents in December, but even prior to that increase, average actual payments were over $1.72 an hour, higher than ever before.

The record high payroll of the industry in 1950 is estimated to have exceeded $2.3 billion, surpassing the previous high mark, $2.2 billion in 1948. Employment rose above 600,000 in the latter part of the year, less than one per cent under the wartime peak, compared with 602,000 in December, 1939. Payments to wage earners for all of 1950 are estimated to have risen to an average of at least $1.73 an hour, approximately 3 cents higher than in 1949 and 10 cents higher than the average for 1948. These data cover only employees engaged in the production and marketing of iron and steel, excluding such activities as mining, transportation and fabrication.

Wage earners worked an average of 39 hours a week in the first 11 months of 1950, but after the first four months, when operations were retarded by shortage of coal, the weekly time averaged close to 40 hours. In all of 1949 the average was 34.5 and in 1948, 39.1 hours.

The basic or minimum wage rate at most iron and steel plants was raised 12.5 cents to $1.31 an hour in December 1950, an increase of nearly 11 per cent in the rate that had been paid since July 1948. This new wage is 53 cents higher than at the end of World War II, an increase of 68 per cent.

Weed Killer

Allowing livestock to graze liberally on plants sprayed with the weed killer, 2,4D, may be risky, according to a new scientific report. Although moderate amounts of 2,4-D are not poisonous to livestock, it is believed that this chemical can bring about an increase in the nitrate content of plants. Nitrates are changed to a poisonous substance in the rumen of cattle and sheep, causing illness and death through a complex process that blocks the transfer of oxygen from the lungs to body tissues. A number of cattle became ill or died after eating pigweed, ragweed, Jimson weed, and similar plants sprayed with 2,4D, workers at the South Dakota experiment station observed. They then made tests which revealed that leaves of beets had a deadly concentration of nitrate after accidental spraying with 2,4-D, while unsprayed leaves contained a relatively harmless amount. The investigators, L. M. Stahler and E. I. Whitehead, urged stockmen to get an immediate diagnosis if illness or death occurs after cattle and sheep feed on sprayed plants.

Home-Front Shooters

Several years ago Remington Arms Company inaugurated a hunting and shooting study that disclosed there were approximately 17,000,000 shooters in the United States in 1948. The study indicated that 37 per cent of all men 15 through 64 years of age did some type of shooting in 1948. As might be expected, the highest percentage (49 per cent) was found among the youngsters . . . the 15 to 19 age group. Most shooters, the survey revealed, took up the sport in their youth, more than 60 per cent of those interviewed having started shooting before they were 20 years of age. Latest figures of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service show that a total of 12,626,539 hunting licenses were issued in the various states during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950. This number exceeds the strength of the United States armed forces during World War II.

Majority of Americans Now Own Their Own Dwellings

The majority of American families now own their own homes, according to data made public by the National Industrial Conference Board covering home ownership by decades for the last half century.

Preliminary figures show that a total of 23.4 million homes were owner-occupied in 1950, representing 55.0 per cent of the 42.5 million homes in the county last year, including farms. A decade before only 43.6 per cent of all U.S. homes were owner-occupied. The highest such proportion prior to 1950 was 47.8 per cent in 1930.

Over the last 50 years, comparing 1950 with 1900, the total number of homes has increased by 175 per cent while the number of owner-occupied homes has increased 225 per cent.

Uncle Sam Says

Farm folks place a high value on dependable friends. The family dog is one of these friends—so faithful, and reliable as a companion and protector. Another dependable farm friend is a U. S. Defense Bond. In these days of mechanized farming when cash expenses are high, farmers know they can depend upon Defense Bonds in time of emergency. Defense Bonds are easily converted into cash to make up for a crop or livestock loss, family accidents and sickness, or other unexpected setbacks.

Uncle Sam Says

Depreciation of machinery and equipment is a big annual expense on today's farms, even though replacements are not bought every year. It is only sound management for a farmer to put part of what his machinery earns each year into a safe investment, readily convertible into cash when the machine is worn out. An ideal way to accumulate this replacement fund is to buy U. S. Defense Bonds. They are safe—earn a good rate of interest—and are easily redeemed when needed.
